Forecast for Friday 13 Nov 2020

Weather: A cold and windy day expected on Friday with sunny periods and blustery showers, these falling as snow above 800 to 1000 metres with some hail mixed in too. Risk of an isolated thunderstorm, this most probable along western coastal ranges. Some longer spells of rain or summit snow possible southern Lochaber and Argyll. Best of the drier and brighter conditions likely to be across southern Kintyre and Arran.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 50%. Cloud lowering to 500 metres in and around showers, this most extensive across Argyll and the Trossachs where it may linger at times. Best of the cloud free summits across Kintyre, Jura and Arran.

Visibility: Generally very good with good air clarity outside of showers and cloud.
